Our History

The Asian Cultural Council (ACC) was founded by John D. Rockefeller 3rd in 1963 as the Asian Cultural Program of the JDR 3rd Fund. Its mission is to establish a direct and personalized approach to foster understanding and respect between Asia and the US through the exchange between artists and specialists in the visual and performing arts.

In 1986 with the help of Kenneth H.C. Fung and a dedicated group of donors, the ACC Hong Kong Arts Program was founded. They formed the ACC Hong Kong's Friends' Committee, chaired by the late J.S. Lee and subsequently by Mr. Fung.

Since 2015, the China, Hong Kong, and Macau Program has operated under the auspices of the Asian Cultural Council (HK) Foundation Limited (ACCHKF), an officially registered charitable institution in Hong Kong under Section 88 of the Inland Revenue Ordinance.

ACCHKF is chaired by Hans Michael Jebsen and supported by generous patrons and foundations.

Our Work

To foster international understanding through immersive programs of cultural exchange that educate and nurture the talents of individual artists and scholars in Asia and the US.

Our Fellows & Network

For more than 50 years, ACC has awarded approximately 6,000 fully customized fellowships and grants to arts professionals and institutions. More than 600 fellowships and grants have been awarded to individuals from China, Hong Kong, and Macau. These outstanding individuals have participated in ACC's transformative cultural exchange experiences in the US and other Asian countries.

Many of ACC's alumni, including Cai Guo-Qiang (1995 Fellow), Chen Kaige (1986 Fellow), and Wucius Wong (1971 Fellow), received ACC's support in the early stages of their careers and are now shaping the vibrant cultural landscape across Asia. These cultural leaders make up ACC's robust network of support across the globe and continue to contribute to the programs of ACC through their invaluable professional knowledge and active engagement.

Message from the Chairman

Polarizing points of view dominate our news cycles and global communities, creating a vacuum for dialogue and compromise. More than ever, we need the arts to express these different realities and bring us together. Recognizing this, ACC's expansive fellowship program and the rigor of its alumni network continue to propel deep and meaningful exchange between artists and arts professionals across disciplines and cultures.

In 2017, ACC Hong Kong was honored to provide fellowship opportunities to individuals deeply invested in theater, art criticism, visual art, dance, film, music, architecture, museum studies, craftsmanship, and photography. Through ACC's customized fellowship program, they are poised to contribute to the conversations and exploration of these art forms on an international level. Concurrently, the wide range of collaborations and dialogues across ACC's alumni network this year testify to the influence of ACC's work beyond the fellowship duration. These exchanges, continued among our alumni in their own communities, amplify the impact of ACC in the wider public.

All of this is enabled by our fellowship donors, patrons, and friends of ACC, who have themselves displayed foresight, enthusiasm, and understanding through their generous support to ACC. Their engagement completes the entire chain of ACC's connective tissues, and provides an important linkage between our artistic talents and the societies and communities these talents impact. ACC is deeply grateful to their unwavering commitment.

It has been truly inspiring looking back at the work of ACC in 2017, and I look forward to see our fellows and alumni bringing fresh and ever more exciting insights into our understanding of the world through the arts.

Fellowship Programs

At the heart of ACC's work is a tailor-made cultural exchange fellowship program that meets the specific needs and aspirations of our fellows, as well as a dynamic network of alumni who continue to engage in collaboration, discussion, and the sharing of knowledge.

Program Overview

The ACC Fellowship program supports artists and scholars from a wide range of art and humanities to pursue specialized training, and find new creative inspiration through travel, research, and exploration. Through cultural exchange among creative talents, the fellowship provides unique opportunities for aspiring individuals to engage in cultural immersion, meaningful cross-cultural experiences, relationship building, collaboration, and exchange of best practices among peers.

Cross-Cultural Collaboration

"New York is changing, the younger generation and newer music are stronger than before. That sounds really exciting, and some new sounds are rising. Quiet sound, non-music, anti-virtuosity improvised music and eclectic experiments are coming up."

– Yan Jun (Sound Artist | 2010 Fellow)

Ideas Exchange

"Exchange ideas about methodologies and experiments for placemaking and public space gave me useful insights on the cultural differences and similarities of the two cities. Experiencing the laughs and tears of each experiment reinforced the need for collaboration and open platforms for public space initiatives."

– Sarah Mui (Architect | 2016 Fellow)

Research and Observation

"The flexibility of ACC fellowship allows me to learn other works, which is not limited to my own profession. The knowledge and experience will definitely contribute to my future works extending beyond the visual arts. I have had many conversations with artists who applied various engagement approaches in their works."

– Kwok Ying (Curator | 2014 Fellow)

Alumni Connection

"With the freedom ACC fellows were granted, we were able to have a relatively relaxed, peaceful state of mind. That circumstance enabled us to share a curiosity and excitement towards one another's backgrounds and practices in a truly amazing, one-of-a-kind manner."

– Jolene Mok (Experimental Film Artist | 2015 Fellow)

Workshops, Masterclasses, and Training Programs

"Among the many masters that I worked with, the most awesome experience was learning from Sylvia Rosenberg, who is 90 but still played the violin amazingly, and shared wholeheartedly her lifelong experience as a violinist with us."

– Vivian Shen Ting-chia (Violinist | 2016 Fellow)

Excursions and Immersion in Other Cultures

"I allow myself to start again from zero, over and over. I see this as a way of taking myself from being a performing artist to becoming a great performing artist."

– Nunu Kong (Choreographer | 2015 Fellow)

Alumni Network

The impact of ACC lasts way beyond the fellowship. Our international network of talented artists and professionals continues to provide ongoing opportunities for dialogue and cross-cultural collaboration, and the platform to make an impact on international understanding and cultural developments.

Applications

The ACC gives out fellowship grants to support international exchange between Asia and the US and among regions in Asia. The reach of ACC extends across the globe. As a partner foundation, ACC Hong Kong administers the China, Hong Kong, and Macau program.

The ACC Fellowship program offers varying degrees of funding, logistical and programmatic support under the following grant categories:

- New York Fellowship

Immersive cross-cultural exchange experience in New York with comprehensive logistical and programmatic support from ACC staff.

- Individual Fellowship

Self-directed research project on arts, humanities, and architecture in the US and/or other regions in Asia. The level of logistical and programmatic support varies according to the needs of the research project and ACC's resources in the destination of research.

- Graduate Scholarship

Subsidy for the living expenses of outstanding students pursuing postgraduate academic studies in the US. Tuition cost is not covered.

- Organizational and Project Grant

Organizations that are facilitating a cultural exchange opportunity for individual project participants may apply to ACC on their behalf.

- Travel Grant

Modest financial support for travel-related expenses of individuals whose projects can make a compelling case for in-depth cross-cultural engagement and/or whose proposed trips can make substantial impact.

Please refer to the ACC website at www.asianculturalcouncil.org.hk for details. Certain restrictions may apply each year.

* ACC may make changes to the application cycle without prior notice.

Perspectives on Exchange

Nadim Abbas
2014 Altius Fellow
Visual Artist

An active Hong Kong visual artist, Nadim Abbas's research-based work contemplates the relationship between the everyday life and images. Abbas received the 2014 Altius Fellowship to participate in the Triangle Arts Association's Residency Program and observe the latest development of visual arts in the US. Upon his return to Hong Kong, Abbas has been invited to exhibit his works in Switzerland, the UK, Russia and other countries.

Three Years On...

On paper, the ACC fellowship is described as something that enabled me to "participate in an artist residency program and observe recent trends in contemporary art in New York". That was certainly the case, but it was really so much more, since I was also granted the ever-elusive time and space to slow down and reflect on the practice of making art, and perhaps by extension, living. All of this without a strict obligation to produce new work, which is actually the perfect motivation to do so!

Visiting Robert Smithson's Spiral Jetty

You might ask how it is possible to slow down amidst the hustle of New York, and looking back (three years already), it was certainly a privileged situation to be in, with one's basic needs taken care of, detached from the daily grind. I often wondered if the next time I returned, this fairy-tale experience would just be a yarn relegated to the storybooks, never to be encountered again with the same degree of wonder. Gladly, I found myself on a recent trip reminiscing fondly about previously trodden back-alley jaunts, or even the stench of the subway.

Although not yet officially within the purview of my grant period, I arrived in New York in a polar February 2015 to complete a piece for the New Museum Triennial that year. This was followed by a short stay in a balmy southern California, where I had the chance to embark, along with some intrepid company, on a tour of iconic land art sites such as Double Negative (Michael Heizer), and Spiral Jetty (Robert Smithson)—a seemingly popular make-out destination for locals.

Nadim's residency at Triangle Arts

Upon returning to New York, I dived into the great many things that the city has to offer, seeing exhibitions, attending performances; the sheer amount of which would fill numerous pages. Many of these were firsts: first time to view (in person) Étant donnés (Marcel Duchamp) in neighboring Philadelphia; the Sol LeWitt wall drawings at Dia:Beacon; the keyboard mastery of Terry Riley at the then newly opened National Sawdust. The list goes on...

For five months I was artist-in-residence at Triangle Arts in DUMBO, Brooklyn, which provided a studio environment to develop new and ongoing ideas, eat a lot of pizza and burgers, as well as engage with an intimate group of US and international artists who were part of the program. Needless to say, it was refreshing to meet and work alongside artists operating with very different methods and contexts. This applies also to my fellow ACC grantees, staying or passing through New York, who generously gave insights into aspects of their respective fields that I don't normally have access to.

Honorary mention goes to my trusty bicycle, which via daily commutes through the city provided a singularly unique perspective and immersion into the urban fabric. Another important discovery, which eventually charted a new direction in my practice, was an introduction, via an interest in masks and mask-making, to the Movement Theater Studio. Here I was encouraged to enroll in a series of classes and became immersed in the teaching of Jacques Lecoq, the legendary pedagogue of physical theatre. This discovery of the creative potential of the moving body left a deep impression on the scope of my work and the reimagining of its possibilities for years to come.

Li Shurui

2015 Désirée & Hans Michael Jebsen Fellow

Visual Artist

A female artist of a new generation in China, Li Shurui is known for her optical art created using the airbrush. Li pursues her practice in Beijing and is based in Dali City, where she conceives her work. Having gained much recognition in recent years, Li received the fellowship to explore possibilities beyond the commercial art market. This opportunity provided Li with much time for reflection and contemplation on her creative direction, and resulted in a major shift in her style upon her return.

Memories of New York

It is spring time in 2018 as of now, but recalling New York in 2016 between jam-packed family dinners—the greasiness now and the lightness back then—I thought of the novel Fortress Besieged.

New York, kept thinking I have to go back. My friends would tease me now, saying, oh, it's a "return" already and not just a "visit" now. Indeed, in the jumble of that center of the universe, I did not see myself as an outsider. New York is the only foreign city that I like, that I am accustomed to, and that I can dwell endlessly. My first visit there was in 2006, at the time I was still an assistant of the Beijing CourtYard Gallery. My boss took me along to install an artwork for the Armory Show, and to put a non-English speaking, Chinese face there.

New York in March was cold and bright, and as the enthusiasm of my first excursion slowly melted away, it somehow felt like Beijing, perhaps only because of the cigarette butts that litter the ground as well. Receiving ACC's fellowship in 2015, I was a single mom and a working artist, a half-year stay in New York was the kind of thing that barely fit into my schedule. My son, my works, exhibition, galleries, studios... all these nagging and hungry babies occupied the whole of my life. I often didn't even have time to wash my hair. Working on the schedule for New York was almost like arranging a huge time off from work. Oh, half a year! My life could slide into an alternate universe and just be with myself —about the same kind of luxury that a leave permit would afford a prisoner.

Li Shurui, Light Extracts

Li Shurui, 155cm

May 2016, I arrived in New York, and when Jeremy from ACC's New York office opened the door to my ACC apartment in Westbeth, I saw a deep cave. I realized at once, this 15-meter deep, four-meter tall massive room with wavy ceilings would be my heaven in the six months ahead. The apartment was in the West Village, and it felt like back in the time at university. Recalling them now, all the images were not only heavily filtered, but also implicated with an overwhelming amount of messages, that now run towards me, I don't even know where to start.

Every day, I ate simply, I exercised, read, learned English, watched movies, watched local television shows, read online news, went grocery shopping in Chinatown, visited museums, attended gallery openings. The timings were just right, I took care of myself well and comfortably. The logics of living slowly but steadily filled in on the minutiae of the city, while the length of half a year acted like a lever between me and the city, regulating my feelings as a temporary dweller; I would fall deeply in love with this place, but I wouldn't become dependent on her, because I have become an admirer, placed at a comfortable angle, exempt from experiencing the sharp-edged relations of productions, and from the triviality and pressure of survival.

With the fellowship encompassing all necessities of life, I hovered and observed. Navigating through the dense forest of Manhattan and observing the different living scenarios that leaked from street-side windows, the "Prosperous" series of works on paper were set off and took form. "Prosperous"... seeing that title, Jane DeBevoise from Asia Art Archive asked, "as in a lot of money?" I said, money is only a sign, its accumulation being the result of the different people and cultures converging together, the energy that lies within their relationship.

This city's wealth, built up years after years, sculpted the face of the city, and the paths of men filled the living logics of different districts. My traveling lifestyle set a constraint to my usual practice of airbrush painting, so I switched to the lighter and more flexible marker pen, notebook, and ruler, drawing intersecting boxes on both sides of the paper, then rolling the paper into cylinders, and binding them with rubber bands found everywhere. When propped up, they looked just like towering buildings. When it was time for departure, it was already early winter, and my attachment to this cityscape has long been projected onto my correspondences with each and every friend here. When they asked me when I might return to New York again—how warm and in awe I felt.

Ting Wing Yan Vivian 丁穎茵
 — Museum Studies

PhD in Museum Studies, University of Leicester
 Founding Member, Art Appraisal Club
 Curator, "When Art Becomes Attitude",
Sparkle! Let's Art, Oi!

Ting Wing Yan Vivian is a researcher, curator, and art critic, currently teaching Museum Studies at the Chinese University of Hong Kong and the University of Leicester. Ting's involvements are varied. She researches on art ecology, writes art critiques, organizes teaching and learning projects, and curates contemporary art exhibitions. Recently, she collaborated with the Blue House and university students to research local cultural preservation and community histories. Her writings and articles have been published in Hong Kong and Chinese art periodicals and publications, including the Hong Kong Visual Arts Yearbook, LEAP, and ARTCO. The fellowship is part of Ting's long-term research on museum development in terms of interpretation strategies, usage of digital technology, and community engagement. The fellowship enables her to observe various museums in the US and correspond with curators and other arts professionals there.

Mandarin Oriental Arts Fellowship
Douglas Brooks — Crafts

Douglas Brooks studies and promotes traditional boatbuilding techniques, and cultures, including those in the US, the UK, and Japan. Since 1996, Brooks has apprenticed with master boatbuilders in Japan and has published numerous articles and publications on boatbuilding, which are the most comprehensive published in any language. He has been recognized by the Japanese Agency for Cultural Affairs for his unique contribution to the preservation of Japan's maritime culture. With the fellowship, Brooks will travel to the Gifu Prefecture to document the work of a builder of cormorant fishing boats. Brooks will also visit Hong Kong, Macau, and Zhangzhou, China, to study antecedents of Japanese boatbuilding technology within the Chinese tradition. This excursion will enable him to trace the connection between these two traditions, and give new context and a cross-cultural perspective to his research.

Sotheby's/T.O.P Fellowship
Mai Thi Thanh Nguyen — Visual Art

Mai Nguyen graduated from Hue College of Arts in 2006 and completed her MA in Visual Arts at Mahasarakham University, Thailand, in 2012. Her works in photography and film center around social issues pertaining to human rights and contemplate on topics such as personal and collective identities, migration, and the complex relationships between the individual and society. She has exhibited in Cambodia, Croatia, Germany, and Vietnam. The fellowship enables Nguyen to interview veterans of the Cambodian-Vietnamese War, a controversial event that incurred much suffering and continues to be the source of conflict between the two countries. Through this project, Nguyen hopes to open up the dialogue between the audience and the interviewees, and between the past and the present, to build a bridge between divisions and create more peaceful and humane relationships in the world.

Sotheby's/T.O.P Fellowship
Minkyung Bae — Visual Art

Minkyung Bae holds a master's degree in sculpture from Ewha Womans University. She has held four solo exhibitions in alternative art spaces in Korea, and in 2010 was awarded the Ilhyun Travel Grant from the Eulji Art Foundation for a two-week residency in Berlin. Her works are concerned with time, senses, and the relationship between the individual and the larger whole, such as that between the individual and society. She explores these elements through durational performances and kinetic installations that incorporate light and sound. From 2011 to 2013, she was also a member of the art collective Valet Parking, and in recent years, has increasingly collaborated with new media artists, computer scientists, instrument makers, composers, and performance artists. Through the fellowship, she seeks to gain new understandings on the development of contemporary art in a new environment.

Donors & Supporters

All along, ACC's work has been made possible by influential leaders and key supporters in the region who understand, resonate with, and support ACC's mission of shared journey with artists and deep engagement with the region's cultural landscape. This year, we would like to express our special gratitude to T.O.P and Sotheby's, for their support towards emerging young Asian artists through the unprecedented donation of a Sotheby's/T.O.P Fellowship.

Acknowledgments

Asian Cultural Council (HK) Foundation Limited is a registered charitable institution in Hong Kong under Section 88 of the Inland Revenue Ordinance. We would like to thank our donors and friends for their steadfast support to our work.

Endowment Donors

Support ACC Hong Kong’s capacity development, ensure its long-term sustainability, and harness the impact of ACC’s robust alumni network.

Désirée & Hans Michael Jebsen

Fellowship Donors

Support artists and scholars from China, Hong Kong, and Macau for immersive programs of cultural exchange that educate and nurture these talents.
